

Gretchen Heinrichs, MD is an Assistant Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Denver Health and University of Colorado Denver School of Medicine. She completed her undergraduate training in Biochemistry and German at Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Her general medical training, as well as her residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology, was completed at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center. She has been in academics since her graduation from residency in 2006. She has received several teaching awards for her work with residents and medical students. Dr Heinrichs has a special interest in Global Health and Women's Health. She joined the staff of the Center for Global Health in July 2008, specifically as the medical school's Associate Director in Global Health for the Mentored Scholarly Activity Program. She has worked in India, Mexico, and Rwanda on Women's Health projects focused on training of physicians, nurses and health care workers. She is currently pursuing a Certificate in Public Health from the University of Colorado School of Public Health.